RoboRAVE 2014 kicked off its 13th year of competition with 1500 plus students from across New Mexico and the world. With its slogan of “Today’s Play, Tomorrow’s Pay,” RoboRAVE is growing each year, according to Director Russ Fisher-Ives. What is the secret to its success? Three goals: 1) Fun. Without it, you don’t come back. 2) Learning by doing — sharing, telling, showing, helping. 3) Teamwork.

And, one just had to walk around during the event on May 3 to see that these goals work! (continued Page 2)

Adriana Parra, Guadalajara Sister Cities Chair and Olga Alicia de la Tore, a teacher from Guadalajara visited Albuquerque from April 28—May 5. Their main purpose was to participate in RoboAcademy, learning how to run robotic competitions in their hometown. While here they also toured our city, including Old Town, Indian Pueblo Culture Center and Bear Canyon Senior Center. They met with Randy Trask, Trade Manager for the City/County Trade Alliance, and Nikki Peone from the City Cultural Services Department to discuss future exchanges. They visited with the Mexican Consul to make arrangements for the Ballet Folkloric to come to Albuquerque this fall. Stay tuned!!

From L to R: Olga Alicia de la Torre, Carol Dawley, Nikki Peone, Marie Keller, Jose Luis Cruz-Campa, Richard Buckler, Adriana Parra, and Randy Trask.
“Mr. President,” the letter began written in Spanish, “I want to thank you and the Albuquerque Sister Cities Foundation for your effort and dedication to the students of our high school in allowing them to participate in RoboRAVE International.” I received the letter at the May 1 RoboRAVE International Student “mixer.” It was signed by Alburquerque, Spain’s Mayor, Angel Vadillo, who I had a chance to meet back in 2007 when he visited us here to help us celebrate our city’s 300th year birthday.

Mayors, I’ve noticed, pay attention to activities that help their youth. For example, your Sasebo Committee (led by Kazumi Kawakubo-Todman) is once again hosting 10 Japanese students at the end of July this year. The student exchanges with Sasebo have been so successful that Sasebo Mayor Tomonaga wants them to continue indefinitely. Good job, Sasebo Committee! Helmstedt, Germany and our local committee here led by Nathan Young, have also engaged in several student exchanges, especially during the tenure of Helmstedt Mayor Eisermann. Retired from politics now, Mayor Eisermann visited Alburquerque during our Balloon Fiesta last year, and expressed similar thanks for the past youth exchanges.

We all intrinsically know that we must help the “next generation,” sometimes referred to as the Millennials, gain an international perspective based on mutual respect and understanding. But, perhaps, as you read the articles and peruse the pictures contained in this newsletter, you might agree that “Roboquerque,” as Mayor Berry repeated in a letter to RoboRAVE international competitors is “where the World Comes to Play with Robots.” And, in the process, sister cities connections are being made for our future! Just ask the students that came from Mexico and Spain. Looking forward to next year, already!

P.S. On a separate note, the May 22 twinning with Lusaka, Zambia is being postponed until later in the summer. Stay tuned!

This year Alburquerque, Spain sent 8 students and 2 teachers for the first time. As reported in the Winter 2014 newsletter, Inquiry Facilitators, the 501 c-3 parent that produces RoboRAVE, went onsite in Spain in November last year to train and demonstrate the “FUN” of robotics. Inquiry Facilitators and ASCF teamed-up to help 8 students come who otherwise couldn’t have participated.

According to one of the teachers, Pedro Piquero, these students, with only a few months of exposure to robotic concepts, are now becoming fanatics. He noted that on May 3, they even stayed up to 3 AM on the eve of the competition here in New Mexico, in order to fine-tune their designs and programs. He predicts that their fascination will translate into further technology interests. Even Mayor Vadillo (of Alburquerque, Spain) has expressed his thanks (see President’s Desk on this page).

Other sister cities represented at either RoboRAVE or the 1st year RoboAcademy teacher training were Chihuahua and Guadalajara, Mexico. ASCF is looking to increase its sister cities involvement even more for next year.
